to inspire students to seek knowledge and careers in science and prepare them for the realities of the global marketplace The ACS Education Division programs support learners and educators through a wide range of activities, services, and resources that enhance chemistry education, prepare future generations of scientists, and engage children in learning about the power of chemistry In 2013, ACS reached out to thousands of elementary and secondary school students in new and innovative ways ACS provided a new generation of undergraduate and graduate students with opportunities to learn skills that they will need to compete and succeed as they move forward with their careers One of ACS's most successful efforts, the ACS Scholars Program, continues to help underrepresented minority students achieve their dreams of degrees and careers in a broad range of chemical sciences In all, nearly 2,500 African-American, Hispanic/Latino, and Native American students have participated in the program since 1995 Of those, nearly 1,400 have earned bachelor's degrees in a chemical science and 40 percent have entered the chemical science workforce, many with advanced degrees More than 180 of these ACS Scholars have gone on to earn doctoral degrees in chemistry, chemical engineering, or a related discipline Another premier program, Project SEED, offers high school students the rare opportunity to work in academic, government, or industrial research laboratories for an eight to ten week term In 2013, a record number of 493 volunteer scientists and coordinators mentored 442 students in nearly 150 institutions The Project SEED Scholarship Subcommittee awarded 28 Project SEED College Scholarships, totaling $140,000, to former SEED students for their freshman year in college In addition, three new renewable Ciba Specialty Chemicals scholarships ($5,000/year) were awarded for the 2013-2016 academic years The ACS High School Chemistry Club program, established in 2005, now has 559 clubs ChemClubs support projects and events that bring chemistry to the classroom and the community In 2013, ACS High School Chemistry Clubs participated in the Coins for Cleaner Water Initiative (in collaboration with the ACS Office of Local Section Activities) Over $10,000 was raised, surpassing the initial goal of $5,000 Another highlighted program, the ACS Science Coaches, was renewed in 2013 This program supports volunteer chemists who assist a teacher on an on-going basis throughout the school year In the 2013 school year, 168 chemist - teacher partnerships were accepted into the ACS Science Coaches program The USA Chemistry Olympiad team participated in the 45th International Chemistry Olympiad (IChO) in Moscow, Russia, with other 287 students from 72 countries The IChO involves both practical and theoretical examinations aimed at identifying the best chemistry students from participating nations The U S team won two gold medals and two silver medals The educational magazine ChemMatters received two Awards for Publication Excellence (APEX) The ChemMatters magazine presents fascinating articles on hot topics for students and, by demystifying the chemistry behind a subject, explains the connection between the chemistry that students learn in school and the world around them It is also used by thousands of teachers as a complement to a textbook The April 2013 issue of ChemMatters (with two NASA - sponsored articles) was submitted for NASA science education product review, resulting in four outstanding ratings and one very good rating With these strong ratings, ChemMatters' articles were recommended for distribution through the many NASA outreach channels The ACS-Hach programs, supported by an endowment from the Hach Scientific Foundation, introduced the ACS-Hach Professional Development Grant which supports professional development experiences for high school chemistry teachers This program is in addition to the other Hach Programs which educate chemistry teachers, help mid-career chemists become chemistry teachers, and provide resources for existing chemistry teachers ACS Membership and Scientific Advancement (M&SA) programs are administered with the vision that ACS will be the premier professional membership organization for all practitioners of chemistry As of December 31, 2013, the ACS has more than 161,000 members Membership programs are built around five fundamental objectives - Advance the chemical sciences and technologies through the delivery of high quality programs that provide cutting-edge technical information to all practitioners of chemistry and chemical engineering, - Communicate the value of chemistry and chemical engineering to the public by providing excellent volunteer-based programs and activities to members, local sections, and technical divisions, - Support a diverse community of chemical professionals through value-based programs, services, and information that allow chemical practitioners to develop and manage their careers in a global environment, - Advance the frontiers of science in multidisciplinary, international context, ensure advances in scientific knowledge and education benefit the global scientific community, and to foster a lifelong connection among international chemical professionals to ACS, and -
